Commissioner Adelstein:

I am responding to your request about violence on TV. I am applauded with the violence that is being allowed to be shown on TV. No only is it harming our children it is harming out entire culture. Whatever is seen by our eyes and enters our minds stays there and makes a difference. If we see pleasant things and happy things we feel that way and if we continue to view violence we become accustomed to it and it doesn't seem to bother us as much as at the begining. There have been reports and studies proving this. You are in a position to stop this and I hope you will listen to the people who take the time to write you and do something about it. Please take off the violence, poronographic, sexual programs so our children won't be effected by them. Thank You.)

Sincerely,

Mary Massey

My thoughts about violence on television are solid. We not only do not need it, but it is harming our society. Please take action to reduce or remove violence on television. Even teenagers should not see it and that goes for many adults as well. And no one can constantly monitor what their teenagers are watching late at night. I vote NO MORE VIOLENCE ON TV. There are plenty of very excellent shows that contain no violence whatsoever. Please support those. You will help save the American family.

I would like to comment on television violence. As a nurse, a mother and grandmother, I believe that I have sufficient experience and have read many studies done on tv violence to present a valuable opinion.

Violence on the screen desensitizes every person watching that screen. It is probably not a good thing for adults, either, but is definitely action that has adverse effects on children. They are still forming their morality and values and are very impressionistic.

I, for one, say that violence should be seriously toned down on television if we are to expect to raise up a generation of peace-loving and responsible citizens.

I thank you for your consideration of this subject.

I have three small children in my home, and I do NOT want them to see the violent things that are shown on TV every day. We can't even watch some of the shows we LIKE, because the commercials in between contain scenes that would give our kids nightmares if they happened to be watching! When we do watch TV, we keep the remote IN HAND so that as soon as the commercials come on, we can mute them and be prepared to change the channel or turn it off if necessary.

We would very much appreciate the reduction of the violence and bad language on the airwaves.

Hello,

I would like to state that I believe that the violence on TV is very damaging and destructive. I'm sure you have heard all of the reasons many times. When something is stated over and over it is usually because it is true. It has been proven that the violence on TV and in movies does indeed impact one's attitudes and world view, especially on the minds of young people. Please clean up our TV programs, not only the violence but the sexual promiscuity.
